REPORT TO HISTORICAL AND LANDMARKS COMMISSION

SUBJECT

Consideration of Historic Resource Inventory Property Designation and a Historical Preservation Agreement (Mills Act Contract) for 324 Madison Street

BACKGROUND

The property owners, Stephanie and Tommy Tran, are requesting a Historical Preservation Agreement (Mills Act Contract) for the property located at 324 Madison Street. A requirement of the Mills Act is that the building must be a qualified structure, listed on either a local, State, or National register. The subject site is not currently listed on any of the aforementioned inventories. Therefore, the applicants are seeking local listing on the City's Historic Resource Inventory (HRI). The property must be added to the HRI prior to approving a Mills Act contract.

The subject property is in the Old Quad historic neighborhood and is located on the west side of Madison Street. The existing residence on the property is a 1,393 square-foot one-story Mediterranean Revival house constructed in 1936 or 1938. The property has a detached one-car garage built in 1955, a newer open-shed roof addition attached to the garage on the northside, and a newer shed structure that is less than 120 square feet.

DISCUSSION

The Mills Act Program allows a qualified property owner to receive a potential property tax reduction and use that savings to assist in offsetting the costs to rehabilitate, restore, and maintain their property. To qualify for the program, the property and/or building must be listed on either a local, State, or National register. The property owner must also have a plan to restore and rehabilitate the property. As the subject site is not listed on any of the aforementioned inventories, the property owner is seeking local listing of the property on the City's Historic Resource Inventory (HRI); as well as approval of a Mills Act Contract and the adoption of a Ten-Year Restoration and Maintenance Plan for the property.

A Department of Parks and Recreation (DPR) 523A Form was prepared by William Kostura, Architectural Historian ("evaluator"), in September 2021, assessing the historical significance of the property based on National and State (California) Register criteria and the City's local criteria for significance. The property is eligible for listing on the City of Santa Clara's HRI based on the evaluation of the adopted Criteria for Local Significance under the architectural, cultural, historical, architectural, and geographical criteria. The residence retains the majority of character defining features of the original building architecture; as well as its contribution to a potentially eligible Historic District (Old Quad) due to its proximity to other historically significant properties. There are presently two properties, 308 Madison and 395 Madison, within 200 feet of 324 Madison Street that are listed on the City's HRI.

In regard to the Criteria for Local Significance, the evaluator identified the property as eligible for listing on the City's HRI for the following:

- Historically or culturally significance based on Criterion 4 for its association with a significant agricultural activity because the first owner, Manuel Ferreira, worked on local fruit canneries for many years;
- Architectural significance based on Criterion 1, 6, and 7 for its association with the 1920s-1930s era and retention of the majority of character defining features of the Mediterranean Revival architecture, construction period, and unique roof materials; and
- Geographic significance based on Criterion 2 for the visual contribution to the historic setting in the Old Quad.

The DPR Form (Attachment 3) details the criteria for evaluation and listing of a potentially historic resource. The analysis concludes that the property meets the requirement of greater than 50 years in age and retains sufficient integrity to qualify as a historic resource based on the evidence presented in the analysis.

The property owner submitted a Statement of Justification (Attachment 1) and Ten-Year Plan (Attachment 5) for the interior and exterior of the residential structure and property grounds. The 10-Year Plan includes repairing damaged wood structure due to termite on the roof trusses, restoring and repairing existing historic, inoperable wood windows, and repainting the exterior of the residence.

Staff finds that the work proposed under the 10-Year Rehabilitation and Maintenance Plan adheres to the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Rehabilitation. The proposed changes support the preservation, protection, and maintenance of a structure that is qualified to be a locally significant resource.

ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW

The Mills Act Program is exempt from CEQA environmental review requirements per CEQA Section 15061(b) (3). The activity is covered by the general rule that CEQA applies only to projects which have the potential for causing a significant effect on the environment where it can be seen with certainty that there is no possibility that the activity in question may have a significant effect on the environment.

PUBLIC CONTACT

Mills Act Contracts are not publicly noticed as they are a private contract between the City and property owner.

RECOMMENDATION

Staff recommends that the Historical and Landmarks Commission find that the Mills Act application and associated Ten-Year Restoration and Maintenance Plan accomplish the intent of preserving and maintaining the historical significance of the historic property and, therefore, recommend Council approve the addition of the property to the HRI; approve the Mills Act Contract; and adopt a Ten-Year Restoration and Maintenance Plan associated with the Historical Preservation Agreement for the property located at 324 Madison Street.

Re: Mills Act Application for 324 Madison Street

Dear Historical and Landmark Commissioners,

We are excited to apply for the Mills Act for our historic home at 324 Madison Street. After moving to Santa Clara from Texas 11 years ago we fell in love with the Old Quad and knew this was the community that we wanted to be a part of. We rented a craftsman home for 9 years in the Old Quad. During this time, we started a family and needed more space for the 5 of us. 2 years ago, when everything seemed upside down, the dream of owning our own home in our neighborhood came true. We found our house, a 3-bedroom 1 bath historic cottage that had been loved and cared for by the original family who built the home. It is full of charm and original features like the distinctive clay roof tiles, wood windows, and wood floors that we were after. We are wanting to adapt the home to suit our family's needs while still preserving the historical home and charm of our neighborhood that drew us to this area. Learning about the Mills Act, we are grateful that it exists to assist in this effort and to ultimately preserve the streetscape of our historic neighborhood. We appreciate your time in reviewing our application, including William Kostura's historic evaluation (DPR523) that supports the historic significance of our home. Please consider us for the Mills Act, we look forward to working with you all to preserve not only our home but our neighborhood.

Sincerely,

Stephanie and Tommy Tran

This property falls within the Old Quad area of Santa Clara, which contains hundreds of houses dating from the 19th century through the 1930s, along with many newer buildings. It encompasses the area bordered by Scott Boulevard to the west, Newhall Street to the south and east, and the railroad tracks to the north and east. Within Old Quad, the west side of the 300-400 block of Madison Street (the subject block) has one of the larger concentrations of houses that pre-date World War II. Ten of the eleven houses from #306 to #476 appear to have been built from the 1880s (or earlier) to 1938 and retain most of their integrity; as do several houses on the east side of the street. The two oldest include #466, a blend of Gothic and Greek revivals; and #395, a side-gabled I-house. (See Continuation Sheet, page 2.)

Description (continued)

The subject house, 324 Madison, is situated on a lot measuring 50 feet in width by 180 feet in depth. The house is set back from the front property line by roughly twenty feet, which allows for a front lawn that is bisected by a concrete path leading to the front entrance. A very narrow strip of land runs alongside the house on the north (right) side, while a wider strip of land with a driveway is to the south. At the end of the driveway, toward the rear of the property, is a small wood-framed garage with a front-gabled roof, rustic siding, and a tilt-up door clad in rustic siding. The garage was built in 1955, and an open, shed-roofed addition on its north side is clearly newer.

The house is one story in height, is wood-framed in construction, is clad in stucco, has a hipped roof with boxed eaves, and measures thirty feet in width by fifty feet in depth. An open porch occupies slightly more than half of the width of the house on its north side. This porch fills a recess on that side and extends forward from the front plane of the house by two feet. Thus, except for this slight projection and recess for the porch at right, the footprint of the house is rectangular in shape.

Two concrete steps lead up to the porch. Its cement floor is polished smooth, while the steps are left unpolished. These steps and porch floor appear to be original.

With one minor exception, all windows have original wooden frames and sash. In front are two identical tripartite windows, one facing the porch, and each with a large fixed central sash flanked by double-hung sash. The upper zone of each part is divided into multiple lights by wooden muntins. On the south side (at left) are two sets of paired windows and three single windows, each double-hung. On the north side are two sets of paired windows and two single windows, all double-hung. In the rear are two double-hung windows plus a single small window with replacement aluminum sash.

The front door is composed of polished wooden boards laid vertically, with a decorative brass grille and decorative brass hardware. This door is fronted by a screen door, also of wood. On the south side of the house is a simple paneled wooden door with upper-level glazing.

The roof of the house is its most distinctive feature. The portions over both the main body of the house and the porch are hipped, and the pitch is moderately steep, giving it a dramatic shape. Instead having traditional molded clay tiles, the roof is covered with clay tiles that are molded so that they interlock with each other. The manufacturer of these tiles was J. Pessagno and Sons, also known as the Interlocking Roof Tile Company, of Niles. In all likelihood this company also made the clay covering of a small living room projection on the south side of the house. The Pessagno company will be described in the History section of this report, below.

There are two chimneys in this house. One is placed against the north wall, while the other is fully within the body of the house and can be seen from the outside where it rises above the roofline.

The style of the house is Mediterranean Revival, and this is mainly due to its clay tile roof and the stucco surface. The stucco is rough-textured in emulation of vernacular buildings of southern Europe. Small curvilinear brackets at the top of the porch posts are the only overtly decorative features aside from the brass elements on the front door.

The interior has a fine finish that remains in original condition. Paired wooden doors with full-length glazing of ten lights each open from the living room to the dining room. Windows possess their original wooden casings, and hardwood floors survive in the living room, dining room, and kitchen. The fireplace is stucco-faced, has a wooden mantle top, and has decorative tiles around the opening.

This section will cover the history of the Old Quad neighborhood of Santa Clara, the history of the subject house, and a brief description of 1920s stucco-clad houses in Santa Clara that puts the history and architecture of this house in context.

Old Quad history

The Old Quad covers the quadrangle shown in an 1866 survey by J.J. Bowen. It encompasses the area bordered by Scott Boulevard to the west, Newhall Street to the south and east, and the railroad tracks to the north and east. The area includes Santa Clara University, which was once the site of Mission Santa Clara. Generally speaking, the Old Quad is the oldest part of Santa Clara. The overwhelming majority of its historic buildings are located here.

Major factors in Santa Clara's growth and economy include:

1777. Founding of Mission Santa Clara de Asis by the Franciscan order of Spain. This mission was secularized by Mexico in 1833 but the mission chapel continued to function as a church afterward. It was enlarged and rebuilt several times over the next century.

1851-present. After the takeover of California by the United States, the Jesuits acquired the mission and established Santa Clara College in 1851. It became known as the University of Santa Clara in 1912 and as Santa Clara University in 1985. The older buildings on this campus date to the period 1911-1930 and were designed by architects Will D. Shea, John J. Donovan, and Henry A. Minton. The chapel of 1928 was designed by Minton to replicate the old adobe mission building of ca. 1824.

1852. The City of Santa Clara incorporates.

1863. The railroad connecting San Francisco and San Jose reaches Santa Clara. The railroad depot still stands, now at 1005 Railroad Avenue.

1885-1990s. Agnew's State Hospital. The Victorian building of 1885 collapsed in the earthquake of 1906, with great loss of life. New buildings were built from 1908 through the 1910s to designs by the State Architect George C. Sellon. After the campus was sold to Sun Microsystems in the late 1990s, only the best four of the Agnew's buildings were retained, and the rest were demolished.

1890s-1950s. Santa Clara Tannery. This long-lasting business occupied many wooden buildings at the northeast corner of Lexington and Grant streets.

1890s-1960s. The Pacific Manufacturing Company was a huge business occupying many buildings in the block of Alviso, Bellomy, Grant, and Locust streets, plus warehouses and sprawling lumber yards in adjacent blocks. It made coffins, window sash, doors, blinds, cabinets, and windmills.

1910s-1960s. Fruit canning. There were several canneries in Santa Clara during these decades, but three were the largest and longest lasting: Rosenberg Brothers and Company; the Pratt-Low Preserving Company; and Libby, McNeill and Libby. Pratt-Low's complex included a huge one-story cannery building plus 25 seasonal workers' cabins in 1915, and by 1950 it had expanded to include over 100 workers' cabins. By 1950 Rosenberg Brothers had absorbed Libby, McNeill and Libby, and by 1961 Rosenberg Brothers had been taken over by the Mayfair Packing Company. Collectively, these canneries were probably the largest employer in the City of Santa Clara during most of the 20th century.

1960s-present. The semiconductor industry becomes important in Santa Clara.

1963. The city's old downtown is razed in order to receive funding from the federal government for urban renewal.

To the above list should be added Santa Clara's close proximity to the city of San Jose, where some Santa Clara residents worked.

The demolition of the city's old downtown was a major loss, but the built environment in Santa Clara is otherwise able to represent, or evoke, important themes in Santa Clara's early history. An adobe house at 3260 The Alameda (now the Santa Clara Women's Club) is a ca. 1790s building that was part of the Spanish-era mission complex. The Berryessa adobe at 373 Jefferson Street (late 1840s) represents the Mexican or very early American period. Two other early properties evoke Santa Clara's early agricultural economy. The older is the James Lick flour mill complex, at 4101 Lick Mill Boulevard, at Mansion Park Drive. Its four buildings were built in 1857, the 1860s, and the 1880s and include a granary, a house, an office, and a hall. The Harris-Lass house at 1889 Market Street (1865) includes a farmhouse, a barn, a water tank, and farming implements. As mentioned above, four early twentieth century buildings survive at Agnew's State Hospital, and about eight buildings from 1911-1930 survive at Santa Clara University.

Most prolifically, the Old Quad area is filled with hundreds of 19th and early 20th century houses that retain good to high integrity. A few houses date to the 1850s, a moderate number date to each decade of the 1860s, 1870s, and 1880s, and very many date to the 1890s-1930s. While it is beyond the scope of this report to describe these houses in any detail, it can be said that they range from modest, vernacular working-class houses to large houses built for the well-to-do. Houses in the latter group are often elaborately decorated, but smaller houses, especially those built before the 1920s, often possess fine details as well.

Because the subject house dates from the 1930s, a number of similarly-scaled stucco houses of the 1920s-1930s are illustrated below. It will be evident that houses from these two decades vary widely in their treatment, from expressive to perfunctory. The photographic selection will illustrate where the subject house falls in this spectrum.

History of the subject house

The first house on this site

This is the second house to have stood on this lot of land. The first was a very small, one-story wood-framed house built some time between 1891 and 1910. Through the year 1926 it was occupied by:

1910: Mrs Isabel Alves, a widow

1915-1916: Joseph Ross, a laborer and laundry worker

1918: Joseph Enos, a driver

1919-1920: Frank Quadros, a laborer and box maker

1922-1926: John Shane, a farmer

In 1926 or 1927 the house was purchased by Manuel and Clementina Ferreira, who probably lived in it at first and then at an uncertain date replaced it with the current house. They were natives of Portugal who moved first to Hawaii, where their first seven children were born, and then in 1925 to Santa Clara, where their next three children were born. They briefly lived with a relative on the 300-400 block of Madison Street, then purchased the house on the subject property. The family lived in the small house for about a decade, and then in the new one that they built.

The Ferreira family

Manuel Ferreira is usually listed in city directories of the 1920s-1940s as working as a laborer, while the 1930 and 1940 censuses and 1939 directory state that he worked as a laborer in fruit canneries. Which canneries he worked at are unknown. In 1955 he worked at Security Warehouse in San Jose. He died in 1964.

His and Clementina's children, Manuel, Jr., John, Frank, , Anthony, Ernest, Adeline, Frances, and William are listed as variously being laborers, cannery workers, employees of the Pacific Manufacturing Company, a clerk at a local drugstore, and a laborer on a farm. Joseph attended classes at San Jose State University where he took drafting. During World War II Frank, John, and Anthony were in the Army, Ernest was in the Navy, and Joseph was in the Marine Corps. Joseph died in the Pacific Theater, apparently in the Philippines in 1944. After the war Manuel and Clementina's daughter Josephine became an assistant librarian at the University of Santa Clara. Clementina lived into the 1970s, and daughter Frances continued to live in the house until her death in 2018.

The design and construction of the house

The exact year the subject house was built is uncertain. The current owners, who have been in touch with the Ferreira family, were told the house was built in 1936, while the official Assessor's date is 1938. What is known beyond doubt is that the house was built from plans drawn by Manuel and Clementina's son, Joseph, who was taking drafting classes at San Jose State University at the time. His drawings on linen of the front and side elevations, the plan, and some construction details survive in the current owners' possession. (He was 20 years old in 1936 and 22 in 1938.) According to the Ferreira family, Manuel Ferreira built the house himself with the help of family members.

The house is very similar to another house just three doors to the north at 372 Madison Street. The dimensions, the composition, the shape of the roof, the roof tiles, and even the brackets at the top of the porch posts are the same. There are two differences of some note. The stucco coating of #372 is smooth instead of textured, and the pattern of muntins in the upper zone of the front windows is different. The official Assessor's date for #372 is 1920, although it may not be quite that old. At any rate it seems likely that Joseph Ferreira used that house as a model when drawing the plans for #324.

The owners of #372 were George and Rosaline Gomes (or Gomez), who like the Ferreriras were natives of Portugal. Before coming to Santa Clara, they lived in Hawaii where they had seven children, just as the Ferreriras had done. George Gomes owned a fruit ranch in 1940, and this may have been the fruit ranch that Frank Ferreira worked on in that year. It thus seems plausible that the Ferreira and Gomes families were related, that the Ferreriras followed the Gomes family to Santa Clara in a pattern of chain migration, and that this is why Joseph Ferreira modeled the design of 324 Madison after that of #372.

J. Pessagno and Sons, Interlocking Roof Tile Company, of Niles

The roof tiles of 324 Madison Street were manufactured by J. Pessagno and Sons, also known as the Interlocking Roof Tile Company. This is known because spare tiles stamped with the Pessagno name were found in the back yard of #324. The firm was located in Niles, which today is part of Fremont.

Pessagno and Sons was founded by Joseph Pessagno (1886-1963), a native of Italy, in 1927. In January of that year he purchased five acres in Niles that were rich in clay and dug a trench pit to remove the material. He built three gas-fired kilns that were each thirty feet in diameter and twelve feet high and two smaller kilns as well. Here he and his sons manufactured roof tiles and other clay products. After being baked, the tiles remained in the kilns to cool for one week. In 1950 the company was staffed by Pessagno, his wife, their sons, the sons' wives, and eight male employees. After Joseph Pessagno died, his sons continued the business until it closed in 1970.

The company was prolific. Their products have been found in Fremont, Hayward, Union City, San Francisco, Oakland, Palo Alto, and San Jose. In Fremont alone, more than 35 buildings with their roof tiles have been found in recent years, though a few of these have since either been torn down or have had their roof tiles replaced. The roof tiles are distinctive in appearance and are readily identifiable by sight because they were molded with grooves that channel rain water and that fit into each other. This molding gave the firm its “Interlocking Roof Tile Company” name. Several houses in Fremont with their tiles are shown below.

Houses of the 1920s and 1930s in Santa Clara

A moderate number of houses of this age and material — most likely in the dozens — can be found in Santa Clara. They are typically one story in height, covered with stucco, and restrained rather than elaborate in their treatment; and thus they are readily differentiated from houses of the 1850s-1910s, which are sheathed in wooden siding and are often picturesque in their composition and their wooden details.

Most houses of the 1920s-1930s are, in fact, plain. Some take the form of Craftsman-style bungalows, with gabled roofs and porches with tapering posts, but by the 1920s such houses in Santa Clara were usually covered with stucco and these lack exposed rafter tails and similar Craftsman touches. Other houses of these decades are closer to Mediterranean Revival in their feeling. Some of these relate to that style only in their form, but others are more expressive. The best examples have two or more of the following features: clay tile roofs or pent roofs; broad porches that project forward from the main part of the house; textured (instead of smooth) stucco surfaces; tripartite windows with wooden mullions, muntins, and sills; arched window and door openings; and columned entrances.

One house is worth specific mention here: 1285 Main Street (1926), which has qualified for the Mills Act. With its broad porch, hipped roof, and tripartite windows it is similar to 324 Madison Street, but differs from that house in being slightly wider, lacking a clay tile roof, and having smooth instead of textured stucco cladding. 1285 Main Street is a fine house, but with its tile roof by Pessagno and Sons, and its textured stucco surface, 324 Madison possesses greater distinction.

Please see photographs of some houses from these decades below.

Integrity

The house has never been moved, so it retains integrity of location. It has not been significantly altered, so it retains integrity of design, materials, workmanship, and feeling. Its early residents would certainly recognize it as the house they had lived in, so it retains integrity of association. Most of the houses that stood on this block in the 1930s still stand, and most of them have not been much altered, so this property also retains integrity of setting.

Evaluation to California Register criteria

The California Register of Historical Resources (California Register) is an inventory of significant architectural, archaeological, and historical resources in the State of California. Resources can be listed in the California Register through a number of methods. State Historical Landmarks and National Register-listed properties are automatically listed in the California Register. Properties can also be nominated to the California Register by local governments, private organizations, or citizens. The evaluative criteria used by the California Register for determining eligibility are closely based on those developed by the National Park Service for the National Register of Historic Places.

In order for a property to be eligible for listing in the California Register, it must be found significant under one or more of the following criteria:

- * Criterion 1 (Events): Resources that are associated with events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of local or regional history, or the cultural heritage of California or the United States.
- * Criterion 2 (Persons): Resources that are associated with the lives of persons important to local, California, or national history.
- * Criterion 3 (Architecture): Resources that embody the distinctive characteristics of a type, period, region, or method of construction, or represent the work of a master, or possess high artistic values.
- * Criterion 4 (Information Potential): Resources or sites that have yielded or have the potential to yield information important to the prehistory or history of the local area, California, or the nation. This criterion typically applies to archaeological remains, which, because there are no plans to excavate the lot, are not being addressed in this report.

Criterion 1 (Events)

This house was built in 1936 or 1938 (sources differ) and was the second house on this site. This is not early in the history of the City of Santa Clara, and thus the house does not evoke the early developmental history of the city. The first owner, Manuel Ferreira, worked as a laborer at one or more of the city's canneries, but so did very many other residents of Santa Clara, many of whose houses probably also still stand. This house does not evoke that important aspect of Santa Clara's history in a particularly notable way. No other patterns of history related to this house come to mind, and so it does not appear to be eligible for the California Register under this criterion.

Criterion 2 (persons)

As mentioned above, Manuel Ferreira worked as a laborer, usually at a fruit cannery. His children also worked in canneries, at the Pacific Manufacturing Company, and at other blue collar and clerical jobs. The canneries and Pacific Manufacturing were important industries in the city, but many other houses that their employees lived in must still stand. None of the Ferreriras were notable in Santa Clara's history, and so the house does not appear to be eligible for the California Register under this criterion.

Criterion 3 (Architecture)

Architecturally, this house compares very favorably with other Santa Clara houses of the 1920s and 1930s. Most houses in the city from those decades are plain, and are restrained in their treatment to the point of anonymity. By contrast, this house has many notable features. They include:

- * tripartite windows with wooden mullions and with wooden muntins that divide the upper zones into multiple lights,
- * a projecting front porch that stretches for over one-half the width of the house,
- * curved brackets at the top of the porch posts,
- * a hipped roof over both the main body of the house and the porch,
- * molded clay roof tiles,
- * a stucco surface that is textured (instead of smooth),
- * a solid wooden front door with a decorative brass grille and brass hardware, and
- * an interior with a high level of finish.

Collectively, these features make this one of the best houses of its size from the 1920s-1930s in the city.

The roof tiles by J. Pessagno and Sons of Niles are a particularly fine feature. While traditional curved clay roof tiles on other Santa Clara houses are also important, the tiles on this house are distinctive in their profile and cause the roof of this house to stand out from other clay tile roofs in the city.

Finally, the integrity of this house, inside and out, is very high. For all of these reasons, the house appears to be eligible for the California Register under this criterion. The Period of Significance is 1936-1938, when it was built.

Criterion 4 (Information Potential, or Archaeology) — This criterion is not addressed in this evaluation because no excavation of the lot is proposed or is being contemplated.

Evaluation under City of Santa Clara criteria

The Criteria for Local Significance were adopted on April 20, 2004, by the City of Santa Clara City Council and are listed under Section 8.9.2 of the City of Santa Clara General Plan, Criteria for Local Significance. Under this section of the General Plan, any building, site, or property in the City that is 50 years old or older and meets certain criteria of architectural, cultural, historical, geographical or archeological significance is potentially eligible.

The subject property appears to most clearly meet the following local criteria:

Criterion for Historical or Cultural Significance

4. The property is associated with a significant industrial, institutional, commercial, agricultural, or transportation activity.

Because the house's first owner, Manuel Ferreira, worked at local fruit canneries for many years, and because none of the cannery buildings survive to evoke that aspect of the city's history, this house reflects that history in their stead, although it is probably one of very many to do so.

Criterion for Architectural Significance

1. The property characterizes an architectural style associated with a particular era and/or ethnic group.

With its dramatic clay tile roof, broad porch, textured stucco surface, curvilinear brackets (at the top of the porch posts), tripartite windows, and wooden door with ornamental brass grille and hardware, this is one of the best houses of the 1920s-1930s and of its size in Santa Clara. The stucco surface and the clay tile roof evoke the Mediterranean Revival style.

6. A building's unique or uncommon building materials, or its historically early or innovative method of construction or assembly.

This is the only known house in Santa Clara with roof tiles manufactured by J. Pessagno and Sons of Niles (Fremont). Pessagno's Interlocking Roof Tile Company made tiles that were molded to interlock with each other and to guide rainwater, and it was prolific over the 43 years of its existence (1927-1970). The shaped tiles add a distinctive appearance to this house's hipped roof and help to distinguish it from other houses of its period in Santa Clara.

7. A building's notable or special attributes of an aesthetic or functional nature. These may include massing, proportion, materials, details, fenestration, ornamentation, artwork or functional layout.

This house's most notable features are its roof, the broad porch and the way the roof is composed of two hips, one over the main body of the house and the other over the porch. This creates a double-hipped effect that adds drama to the roofline.

Criterion for Geographic Significance

2. A building's continuity and compatibility with adjacent buildings and/or visual contribution to a group of similar buildings.

This house is one of about ten on the west side of the 300-400 block of Madison Street and several on the east side that pre-date World War II and retain good to high integrity. The range of construction dates is wide (from the 1880s or earlier through the 1930s) and the block includes a variety of styles; nevertheless, the block does convey the feeling of a historic neighborhood. Although Santa Clara is rich in historic houses, it is uncommon to find so many on a single block. No formal survey has been performed to document the existence of a historic district here, but it seems likely that one would be found to exist if a survey was performed.

Conclusions and Recommendations

The house at 324 Madison Street is eligible for listing on the City of Santa Clara Architecturally or Historically Significant Properties based on its age (over eighty years), its high integrity, and its meeting local criteria for historical, architectural, and geographic significance.

372 Madison Street. This house appears to predate the subject house but closely resembles it in its form, composition, fenestration, and use of roof tiles. Other stucco-clad houses from about the 1920s-1930s in Santa Clara's Old Quad

For purposes of comparison with the subject house, the author of this report has informally surveyed the Old Quad area looking for stucco-clad houses that appear to date to the 1920s and 1930s. The examples shown below exhibit a range of architectural quality. With a few exceptions, the construction dates are unknown; the inclusion of houses on these pages is based mainly on their architectural appearance.

Assessor's Parcel Map

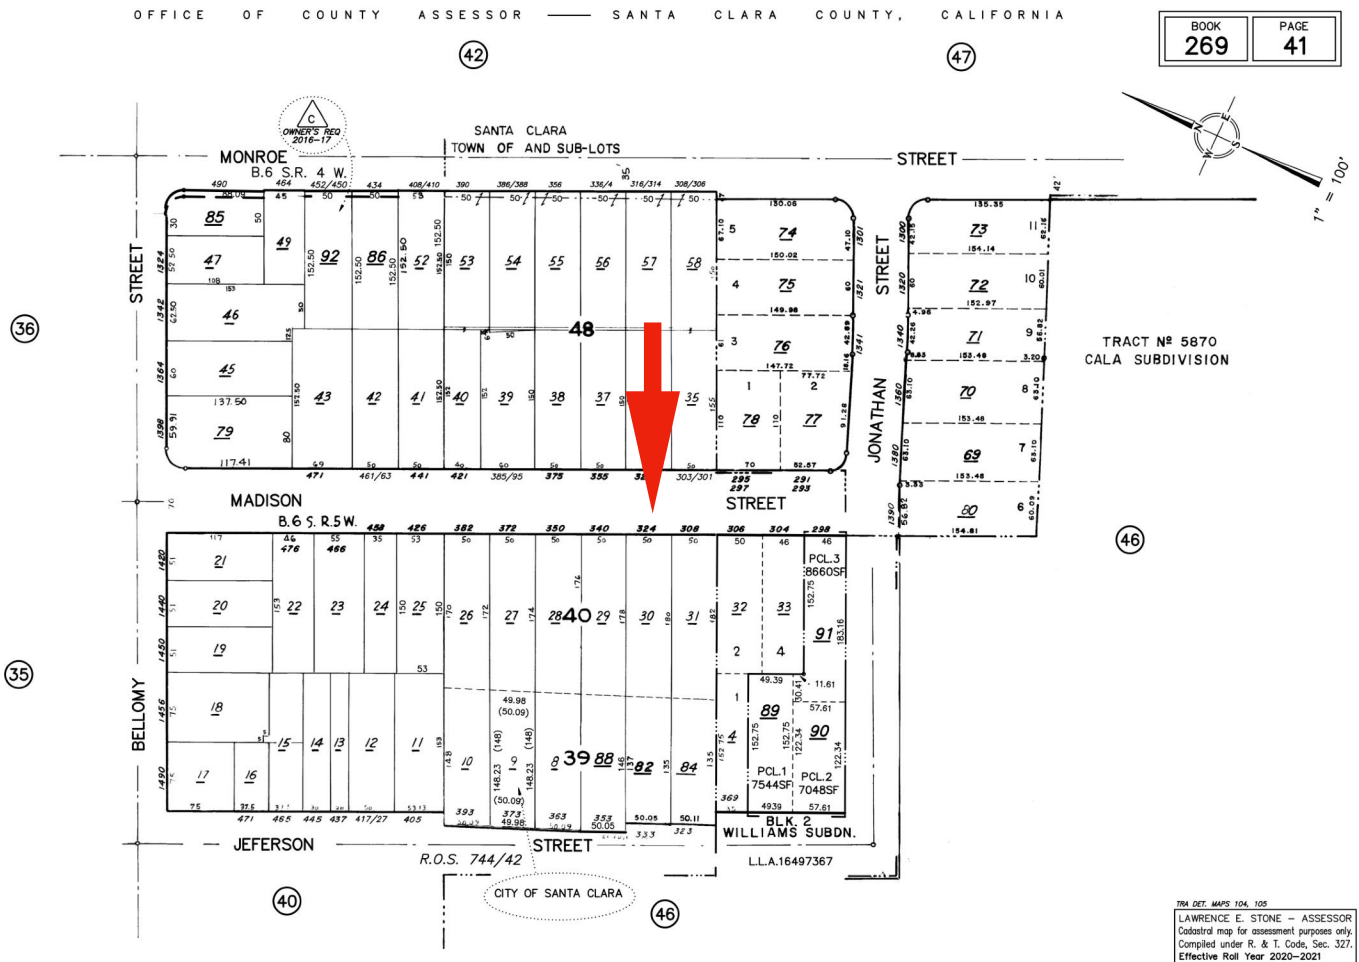

Exhibit C

Secretary of Interior's Standards for Rehabilitation

1. A property will be used as it was historically or be given a new use that requires minimal change to its distinctive materials, features, spaces, and spatial relationships.
2. The historic character of a property will be retained and preserved. The removal of distinctive materials or alteration of features, spaces, and spatial relationships that characterize a property will be avoided.
3. Each property will be recognized as a physical record of its time, place, and use. Changes that create a false sense of historical development, such as adding conjectural features or elements from other historic properties, will not be undertaken.
4. Changes to a property that have acquired historic significance in their own right will be retained and preserved.
5. Distinctive materials, features, finishes, and construction techniques or examples of craftsmanship that characterize a property will be preserved.
6. Deteriorated historic features will be repaired rather than replaced. Where the severity of deterioration requires replacement of a distinctive feature, the new feature will match the old in design, color, texture, and, where possible, materials. Replacement of missing features will be substantiated by documentary and physical evidence.
7. Chemical or physical treatments, if appropriate, will be undertaken using the gentlest means possible. Treatments that cause damage to historic materials will not be used.
8. Archeological resources will be protected and preserved in place. If such resources must be disturbed, mitigation measures will be undertaken.
9. New additions, exterior alterations, or related new construction will not destroy historic materials, features, and spatial relationships that characterize the property. The new work will be differentiated from the old and will be compatible with the historic materials, features, size, scale and proportion, and massing to protect the integrity of the property and its environment.
10. New additions and adjacent or related new construction will be undertaken in such a manner that, if removed in the future, the essential form and integrity of the historic property and its environment would be unimpaired.

10 Year Restoration Maintenance Plan

September 8, 2022

Tommy and Stephanie Tran
324 Madison Street
Santa Clara, CA 95050

Dear Planning Staff and Historic & Landmark Commissioners,

The following is our proposed 10-year plan for the restorations and maintenance of our historic home at 324 Madison St. All items to meet the Secretary of Interiors standards for Treatment of Historic Properties:

YEAR 1-3 (2023-2025)

Repair damaged wood structure due to termite

- Roof truss between 1st and 2nd bedroom
- Truss above electrical panel in attic
- Truss above back bedroom by the bathroom

Stucco: Repair cracked/damaged stucco due to the chimney pulling away from the house.

Foundation: Repair chimney foundation due to poor drainage

Plumbing: replace all galvanized plumbing throughout the house

Addition: A rear addition to the residence to accommodate: a master bedroom with ensuite bathroom (a second bathroom as there currently is only one) and walk-in closet and a laundry room to adapt the home to meet the homeowners growing family needs (adaptive reuse of a historic structure).

YEAR 4 (2026)

Electrical: Update all electrical systems including replacing knob and tube wiring.

YEAR 5 (2027)

Exterior grading and drainage along the North side of the house with the chimney. Pooling of water when it rains has caused the chimney to shift and pull away from the house and cause cracking in the stucco along the lower portion of the house on this side.

YEAR 6-7 (2028-2029)

Window Restoration: Restore / Repair existing historic wood window sashes. Where windows sashes are inoperable from being painted shut or where pulley ropes have been they will be restored to working order by cutting the paint and installing new pulley ropes where required. Any minor dry rot areas on the window sashes shall be repaired with epoxy filler and repainted to match. Where elements of the existing window sashes have excessive rot (stiles or rails) they shall be replaced with salvaged or custom milled wood to match. Glazing putty, where cracked, shall be replaced and the window sash shall be painted to match existing.

YEAR 8-9 (2030-2031)

Roofing: Replace ~24 broken historic clay roof tiles with similar tiles from salvage yard. Replace gutters and downspouts to period specific style. The current downspouts are detaching from the gutters. Meanwhile the gutters are showing their age. Downspouts will also be tied into sub-surface drain lines to avoid saturating ground along the foundation.

Kitchen remodel: Replace flooring, counter tops, fixtures, and backsplash with period-specific finishes. Replace cabinets with shaker style cabinets

YEAR 10 (2032)

Painting: Repaint entire exterior of residence, including all exterior eaves, gutters, downspouts, windows, doors and associated trim. Any minor dry rot or pest/rodent damaged areas found shall be repaired with epoxy filler and repainted to match. Where wood material is excessively damaged it shall be replaced with salvaged or custom milled wood to match the profile of the original.

We are excited about restoring and rehabilitating our wonderful historic home so that it can be preserved and enjoyed for many years to come.

Sincerely,

Tommy & Stephanie Tran
